

TALKING REALITIES
young parenting peer education program

Talking Realities supports young parents to commit to a comprehensive training program and graduate as peer educators able to pass onto other young people, information about what it's really like to be a parent at a young age.

For many this reconnects them with education for the first time since they became parents. They can then choose to build on these subjects and enrol in a TAFE course improving their future employment and career prospects. The program has demonstrated positive outcomes in supporting young parents to make the transition into community participation, further education and employment.

The 'In school' presentation 'Talking Realities-young parenting' encourages students to think about what is involved in parenting; like sleepless nights, knowing how to manage when they or their baby are sick, the responsibility and that not all young parents have family support. Teenage parenting isn't glamorised or presented in a negative light, but rather described realistically and honestly through the experiences of the presenters.

If you support young people at school or through community based services come along and see

'Talking Realities-young parenting'

Presented to you by the

2011 Talking Realities Group

Wednesday 30th on November 10.30 to 1pm
light lunch provided

Best Western Buckingham International
1130 Nepean Highway, Highett

For details please don't hesitate to call to speak to Janet Bromley on 0417 557 346

or to book your place please call

Ph: 9093 5977